Classification and Regression, and what algorithms are best to use with both.

Classification is like pattern recognition where items are placed into categories, whereas regression finds a relationship between observations or even categories.

Classification can use sci-kit learn classifiers where regression can use k-means and other liner regression models up to gradient dissent.